Entrepreneurship Development In Sub-Saharan Africa: Evidence from GEM data

Adeosun Oluyemi Theophilus, University of Lagos, Nigeria.

- Innovation is good
- ...for growth
- ... also for the eight SDG in Sub-Saharan Africa
- but there are problems

This is true. But is it relevant?

- Try to embed yourself into a current discussion
- Referencing Schumpeter is nice just as referring to the econ. growth discussion from the early 90s.
- But try to be more systematic and in the present
- Entrepreneurs can be women!

Assessment Of Human Resource Management And Just-In- Time Practices On The Performance Of Building Construction Firms In South-Western Nigeria.

Babalola Ifedolapo Helen, Federal University of Technology
Akure, Nigeria

This 131 pages document was not a paper.

Let's break it down:

- Assessment Of Human Resource Management
- and
- Just-In- Time Practices
- On The Performance Of Building Construction Firms
- In South-Western Nigeria

Who is your audience?*

*In a PhD setting...

- Well crafted manuscript
- Very serious and lots of attention to detail
- Can you think about a version where your context is just an example?

No room for surprises?

The determinants of Small and Medium Enterprises (SMEs) Innovation Strategies in Cameroon Pharmaceutical System.

Claude Ndaki Mboulet, Saint Monica University, Cameroon.

- Nice and informative cases
- Relevant topic
- But...

Form problems

- No or very little methodology
- No documented foundation in a current discussion

Overall issues

- Can't it be okay to have no patents? (more arguments!)
- What is your notion of innovation and why?

Some ideas

- Patent and publications data
- GVC literature (notion of upgrading)
